The federal state of Baden-Württemberg, located southwest in Germany, is one of the most economical developed and competitive regions in Europe. The labour market is stable and the need for qualified professionals in various industries remains high.

The Black Forest is Germany's highest and largest contiguous middle-size mountain and is located in the southwest of Baden-Württemberg. It is the most important tourist region of the federal State and the most visited holiday destination among the German middle mountains. Not only the natural landscape is unique, but also the regions and cities that comprise the Black Forest. Besides Karlsruhe and Pforzheim in the north, also Freiburg at the French border and Waldshut at the Swiss border belong to the popular holiday area, which is considered "Germany's-Land's most beautiful culinary delight".
