Job Vacancy Details: https://goo.gl/kRnws5

Essens is an ambitious company with a defined expansion strategy. Thanks to the uniqueness of our product we are doing business with all the major publishing companies in Norway like Schibsted, Aller, Amedia, Polaris and Nettavisen, as well as national and international advertiser agencies. We are well funded and positioned for growth domestically and internationally in 2018 and 2019. To support the strategy we are expanding in the development and sales departments.

Skills/requirements:

You will work in the full stack product team to create optimal experiences for our customers, agencies and publishers.

You will utilise a variety of backend technologies to make sure: Our customers ad campaigns match the right articles (Solr). Data points for customer entities such as campaign performance, budget pacing and balance are processed correctly (Java). We have the right data model to support this (SQL).

You'll take part in decisions related to new development projects and software portfolio life cycle.

You'll do project scoping and requirement specification with the rest of the team.

You'll challenge our status quo, drive innovation and apply agile best practices (we know we have a way to go).

You are an experienced Java developer and expert in backend technologies.

Knowledge of other languages like Python, Perl or JavaScript is a real plus.

It is natural for you to work with debugging tools and testing frameworks such as JUnit and Mockito.

You have experience using cloud computing services such as the AWS environment, particularly S3, EC2, Redshift, EMR and Elastic Search.

You have general SysAdm and DevOps knowledge.

You have a master's or bachelor's degree in a relevant discipline (Years with relevant experience can compensate for this).

Nice to have competencies:

Real-time data processing applications.

Streams in Solr for data processing and statistical purposes.

NoSQL data backends (Redis, MongoDB, ElasticSearch).
